HARRY A. MALONE, East Boston: "My resolution for the New Year is to use safety on the highways for both motorist and pedestrian. Also to promote friendship among our people at home and abroad, which will lead to world peace, better understanding and prosperity of all."

ELMO G. LIVINGSTONE, West Medford: "I resolve to think before I speak or act or write. I say will make such a good impression on those who see and hear that they may think before they speak or act."

Marshal Joffre, as World Will Remember Him, the Stalwart Leader in His Country's Darkest Hours

BOSTON HAS KINDLY MEMORIES OF Marshal Joffre's visit to this city. The hero of the first battle of the Marne is shown here greeting Mary Curley, daughter of the mayor, at the reception in his honor on Boston Common. Few receptions have equalled in enthusiasm the one tendered the marshal by Boston.

ANOTHER PICTURE OF THE GREAT war leader during his visit to the United States. He came here and was acclaimed on all sides. This was taken in New York as Marshal Joffre saluted in response to the cheers of the throngs which greeted him. He was fresh from the battlefields of his native land when he came here and was acclaimed on all sides for the deeds which had won him fame as a military strategist and a warrior of great courage.

Gallo and his family left Saturday to visit relatives on Elm st. Lawrence. They were to return to Providence today.

An investigation by the Providence police revealed that both the boiler and hot water heater in the basement were intact following the explosion and therefore could not have been the cause of the explosion.

It was later declared by police that a bomb may have been the cause. The explosion rocked the entire neighborhood and threw that district into an uproar.

CARDINAL RAPS HISTORIANS

flaming example of some historical.

He blamed propaganda for the suffering of Ireland and defended the names of Patrick and Bridget as having been mercilessly belittled in an effort to detract from the glorious histories of those who bore those names.

JUSTICE TO IRELAND

"Irishmen are suffering all over the world today for the nasty propaganda spread against their country centuries ago," he said.

"It was the purpose of certain kings and queens of England to crush anything connected with Catholicism."

They were playing politics against religion and that series of tremendous events has caused suffering in Ireland and by Irishmen ever since.

"But people are beginning to wake up now."

He concluded with a pledge to give his support to the listeners in propounding the real, truthful history of Catholicism to the public.

Cardinal O'Connell was presented by Rt. Rev. Michael J. Hahnen, pastor of St. Peter's Church, Dorchester, who presided at the first session of the 11th annual meeting, that will extend three days.

Mail Order Romance Ends in Forgiveness in Court

Lowell, Dec. 29 (AP)—A mail order romance ended dramatically in district court today with the reunion of a disillusioned wife and starved boy to a husband and father out of the West.

The final chapter brought a suspended sentence of two months and a year's probation to Charles P. Winters, Tewksbury, shack dweller, and a two-year probation to Mrs. Anna May Walker, the wife who was lured from Montana with promises of riches and luxury.

Instead she found the love of her promiscuous agency sailor in a cold, foodless, barren shack in the woods of Tewksbury.

COURT FLAYS SUITOR
Fired by the lust of his three-year-old boy, who was taken by the "mailing" mother, Winters followed on borrowed funds with the intention of returning to his home in big-city wonder at it all.

Winters was upbraided by Judge Fisher for the part he played in enticing Mrs. Walker away from her home at Sydney, Mont., with promises of riches he did not have.

BOY BEGGED FOR FOOD
"Men of your type, who lure girls to such a haven, are cowardly and despicable," the judge said. "And you deserve nothing but severe treatment."

Winters hung his head under the fire of the court and when he pleaded for forgiveness and promised to do better the probation and suspended sentence were given.

State Trooper John P. Regan of the Reading barracks told the court of conditions in the dilapidated low nest. Court attachers and police were moved as Officer Regan told of the boy's pleas for food and warmth.

Court records revealed that Winters was arrested in 1924 for non-support of his former wife, now dead, and again in 1928 on a Boston larceny charge. The non-support charge in Somerville was dropped on file.

He is the father of two boys, 16 and 11, who live with Winters' mother in Somerville.

"I seldom keep a car more than six months," Howard said, explaining his hobby. "I guess I'm like a horse fancier. I like to own every new class model that comes along."

Last spring Howard bought a powerful, custom-built eight-cylinder car of an expensive make. It was painted in three shades of red. Before he had owned it six weeks another manufacturer brought out a 16-cylinder model.

Howard bought the first one sent to Mexico and had it painted a pale blue.

WOODS WILL BE SEARCHED FOR 'LOST' BRIDE

Worcester, Dec. 28.—Search for Barbara Bragwell, "lovely bride," turned to a fear that she perished in the State Detective's hands. J. McCarthy announced today that the bride of a Worcester State Hospital will be searched for her body.

The girl, who hopped her Oxford friends into believing she was the bride of "Mr. William Bragwell, English knight," instead of William Bragwell, humble steamship clerk, escaped from the hospital a week ago, where she was to undergo surgery tests.

"The Bragwell family has convinced me that they know nothing of their daughter's whereabouts," Detective McCarthy said today.

"The only thing that could have happened to her, in my mind, now is that she perished in the storm of the last week."

MAY BE RECOVERED
He announced he would organize a systematic search of the hospital grounds and woods in the belief her body will be found under the snow.

She may have suffered a leg or ankle injury in the 20-foot leap she made in making her escape, he said, and dropped in some secluded spot in a section untraversed at this time of the year.

Three storms and several bitter cold days since her escape have convinced him the girl probably perished in her desperate dash for freedom.

Hundreds of acres of woodland surround the hospital and it is dotted with logs, ponds and quarries where a body could lie until next spring, he said.

THOROUGH SEARCH PLANNED
All available police, Boy Scouts and volunteers will be called for the hunt, he said.

A cable from the assembly clerk dated Southampton, Eng., he regarded as a blind. It said he was sailing for America to claim his bride and weather the difficulties that arose after their unique marriage.

Detective McCarthy pointed out, however, that the young husband failed to state the name of the vessel he was sailing on or when he would arrive here. He also indicated lack of funds, even to passage across, he said.

Briefly, Vandenberg's newest suggestion would increase the loan value on the certificates to approximately 50 per cent and enable the 4,000,000 veterans who have already borrowed the maximum permitted by law, to get another $250,000. He would make proof of personal need a prerequisite to the additional loan.

KEITH BOSTON PUTSON GALA PROGRAM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ
The RKO Keith Boston has a well balanced bill for the New Year holiday week. On screen is "Madonna of the Streets," an on stage in an excellent variety bill. The topliners are the career comic, Joe and Pete Michon. Others who keep the amusement ball rolling are Harris and Van, aided by Paul; Miss Bobby Folsom; the De Torgos, assisted by Sydney Roy and Joe Bradshaw; and Samson and Samson.

"Madonna of the Streets" is based upon W. B. Maxwell's novel, "The Ragged Messenger." Evelyn Brent has a "fuzzy daddy" who plans to place a million dollars in her hands when he dies. He does just so, but he has neglected to change his will to make provision for the girl. She finds herself just about where she started financially.

Robert Anna, of the old gentleman's nephew, has inherited the fortune, and this means Samson and Samson in the youth's direction. Her aim is to retrieve "her million." She descends to the depths in the course of her quest; then she falls in love, and cupid does its real. This wealth comes to her finally through the wedding ring.

The story is strongly knit and has been finely directed. Miss Brent and Mr. Ames turn in superb characterizations.

LAST DAYS FOR KEITH FILM

Three days more remain in what is seen by Wheeler and Bob. The picture is a comedy, and it is a very good one. It is a very good one and it is not the least bit afraid of the camera. It is a very good one and it is not the least bit afraid of the camera.

SYMPHONY IN PENSION FUND CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH
The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, gave its first Pension Fund concert yesterday at Symphony Hall, with a program that included the Overture to Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," the same composer's Prelude to "Lohengrin," Chalkovsky's Fourth Symphony, and Stravinsky's Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra. Josie Maria Sanroma was soloist.

This was a brilliant concert. The symphony was rendered as well as it has ever been here under Dr. Koussevitzky, which means that the performance was of surpassing eloquence, delivered at the very white heat of passion. It indicated once more Dr. Koussevitzky's unquestioned pre-eminence among interpreters of Chalkovsky who have appeared here within the past few decades. The Prelude to "Lohengrin" was played in the sensitive vein that the conductor has made familiar here. On the other hand one might question the roughness, especially of the brass, in the Overture, though there is no denying that the interpretation was dramatic.

Most interesting of all, however, was the work, yesterday, at a second time. First played at a regular subscription concert recently, this work, yesterday, had formed the official impression of the audience. It was a work of idiom of modish, elegant in the manner of the third decade of the twentieth century. But, it was a work of idiom of modish, elegant in the manner of the third decade of the twentieth century. AMERICAN BOXERS THE FIGHT

AMERICAN BOXING WITH George Underwood

Three Great Fights
Ketchel vs. O'Brien
Driscoll vs. Altell
Last, Not Least,
Dempsy vs. Wild
Bull of Pampas

My Word! Old Cove Smelt a Bloomin' Horse!

Now an imaginative and inquiring fan wants us to tell of the greatest fights—plum, plum, you, not singular—we ever saw. When we answered our wrestling friend the other day, we certainly started something. However, we're here to serve. Always glad to oblige. Let's go! The greatest fight we ever saw—Donkey-Pips, for condensed thrills, heart battling, pure and unadulterated slugging; Ketchel-O'Brien, for sustained thrills, gramatic sweep, counter-attacking combat between flaming youth and seasoned age, during which the tide constantly ebbed and flowed and finally turned into a most dramatic climax; Driscoll-Altell, for sheer boxing wizardry, speed, skill and artistry, a duel between two of the cleverest boxing masters of the age with every trick and strategy of the ring art at their proverbial fingertips.

Driscoll the great Altell, Stanley Ketchel and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, fought ten of the most thrilling rounds that ever stirred the soul of an onlooker.

THE MICHIGAN ASSASSIN
Ketchel, the Michigan Assassin, was just what his name implied. He was a slightly mannerly boxer with just an astonishing attack and slashing offense. He was in the glory of his youth and the full strength of his young muscles.

O'Brien was a heavy, courageous, scientific boxer. He was past his competitive peak and was heading down the trail that leads to the barren land of losing. In the performance of the gallery gods O'Brien entered the ring with Ketchel with "nothing but his gloves and a prayer book."

From the first clang of the gong Ketchel came ripping, slashing in, bludgeoning away with both hands, cutting and slashing away with all the ferocious savagery of a timber wolf.

And with what superb ring craft and gallant fighting heart did the Philadelphia Irishman meet that young terror from the West.

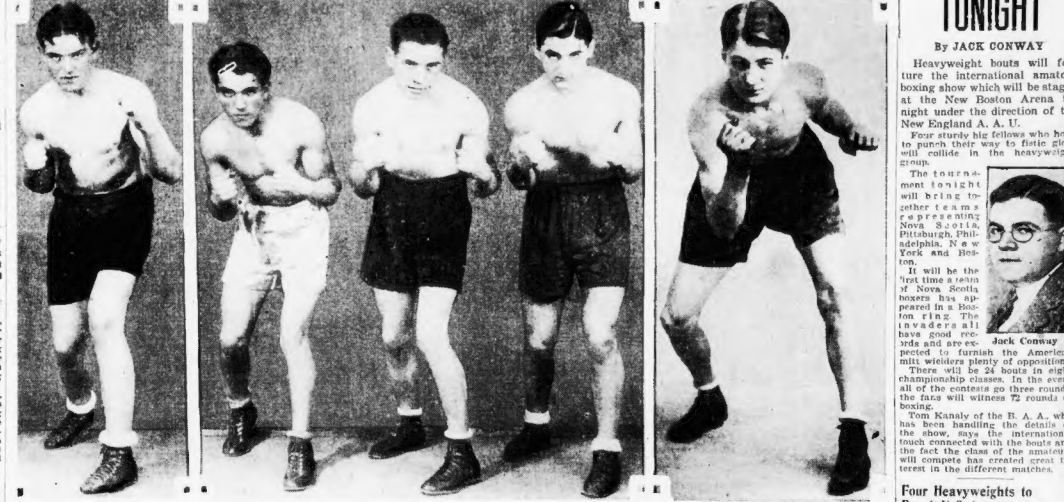

The tide constantly ebbed and flowed. Round merged into round. But Ketchel's attack was the action that both seemed upon both and the tenth round came all before the spectators were aware of it.

Knocked Cold: Not Out
It lifted him off his feet, turned him half round in the air and sent him sprawling on his back. When the lion-hearted veteran rolled over, he was still on his feet, but the sharp edge of the old fashioned sandbagged box, Philadelphia Jack was knocked stiffer than a corpse—and not knocked out!

Brunts Face Hard Month With 3 Games on Schedule

LOCALS PLAY OTTAWA SENATORS TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES
For the next month the Bruins are going to be the busiest club in the N. H. L. for the American championships are scheduled to play in no less than 13 games, opening with the Ottawa Senators tomorrow night and winding up with the Rangers on Jan. 29.

To further complicate matters, eight of these games will be played away from home and the arrangement is one of the most difficult in the schedule committee ever confronted. Following their meeting with Chicago at the Garden one week from tomorrow night, the Bruins take to the road. After putting on their show in the Chicago arena, they are allowed three days to find a way to Philadelphia, and home games with Ottawa and the Quakers as side dishes.

It is not difficult to tell when the work will turn in properly, the Bruins should be in no worse a position than they were when they left last night. The Ottawa Senators tomorrow night will be a real test, and one of the most difficult in the schedule.

Without King Clancy, the Senators have lost their best player. The Bruins will have to rely on their own strength to win the game.

The Bruins have found themselves and to their total satisfaction, but the fans will be satisfied if they get a victory in these three games.

Benji Grant, who was acquired on loan from the Toronto Maple Leafs, was a wonderful addition to the team. He played a great game in the first game.

Neither team has been defeated in a tournament of games as the Bruins have won all three games.

HARD DRILL FOR COUGAR TEAM

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 28.—Alabama and Washington State football teams, which clash in the 16th annual New Year's Day Tournament of Roses game, will resume practice today.

Coach Orr "Babe" Hollingsworth expects to put his gridiron through a hard session today and tomorrow, always then to taper down on Wednesday.

Coach Wallace Wade, of Alabama, gave his squad his last strenuous drill Saturday. From now on it will be a matter of polishing off in an effort to round the team into proper physical and mental condition for the struggle.

Wade's injury inflicts some one before the coming clash, both teams expect to send their strongest array into the Rose Tournament.

Wade's indications are that 65,000 will witness the struggle, which marks Alabama's third appearance in the annual intercollegiate classic and Washington State's second.

MAX MUST MEET SHARKE IN JUNE

New York, Dec. 29 (US)—On the eve of the big conference that will decide New York's status in the 1931 heavyweight situation, Chairman James A. Purley, of the State athletic commission, today laid down his cards, face up.

Max Schmeling must meet Jack Sharkey here in June or lose his status as heavyweight champion in this State.

In the event Schmeling refuses, the New York commission will ask Sharkey to meet an outstanding heavyweight, and will recognize the winner as champion.

Sharkey's resignation as a member of the commission has been withdrawn, and he will remain on the board until the situation has been adjusted to his satisfaction.

This platform will be outlined for Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, and William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, when they make their appearance before the commission tomorrow to present to Sharkey's nomination as challenger.

Purley was asked why Sharkey is being singled out, and why the commission has ordered Sharkey not to meet Young Stribling, who is the only contender who has kept in action.

"Because Sharkey has beaten Stribling," Purley replied, "and because Sharkey is a better fighter than Stribling. He has more power and is faster. He is the only contender who has kept in action."

Bezdek Hurls Bombshell at Coaches' Convention

New York, Dec. 29 (INS)—Hugo Bezdek, former football coach at Penn State and now director of physical education there, threw a bombshell into the tenth annual meeting of the Football Coaches' Association of America here today when he presented for their consideration 14 points for the benefit of the sport.

Several of the proposals advocated revolutionary changes and aroused considerable indignation from some of the delegates.

Bezdek's report, gathered from several sources after discussions with various university authorities, hands without gloves some of the so-called evils of the game.

He recommended that administrative control of college athletics be centralized in the head of a school of physical education who should be responsible to the president and trustees; that a football coach be a bona fide member of the college faculty; and that steps be taken to abolish recruiting and subsidizing of athletes; and that considerable less time be devoted to football practice.

Action on Bezdek's report was deferred.

That publicity from the colleges shall be presented to the public in a manner to emphasize the educational value of football.

New York taxi drivers are "more polite" than those in London, declares Viola Tree. She finds them particularly courteous and always in a hurry.

"Americans are very anxious and self-conscious about their manners," says Miss Tree. "They are always asking me how I like it here, and if I find it as interesting as England. I think in England never give a thought to what Americans think of our land. We just take it for granted that they're thoroughly thrilled by it."

"Funny people, these Americans."

Sports Jersey Now More Feminine

By ANN ARDEN

EVERY JERSEY devoted to sports, is becoming more feminine. Embroidered with epaulettes, this sporty plain fabric becomes a novelty that adds a daintily feminine note to the sporty plain blouse. This new treatment offers an interesting pattern without the addition of other colors. The fabric promises to be popular for southern resort wear.

THE SUIT being an universally endorsed, a veritable avalanche of versions of the accompanying blouse has naturally descended upon us! After all, when one seriously goes in for the suit wardrobe, it is rather vital to have a large and varied array of blouses.

THE SHORT luckless blouse retains its favor. This is usually made of a material that fits to the general informality of the suit itself. For the trendiest suit, a short blouse of jersey or wool crepe is best. All the newest blouses have slightly higher necks than daytime.

WHETHER OR not we are taking the trend toward the Victorian fashions and virtues seriously, there is a tendency to higher necklines. The very newest neckline is quite undisturbed. It fits closely about the base of the throat. Sometimes it is softened by a scarf or a draped effect that is caught with a pin or a large button, or tied in soft bow.

A DECIDED contrast of blouse and skirt is becoming a feature of the mode and the costume pictured embodies many new features.

THE EYELET embroidered silk jersey blouse is in a warm biscuit shade, the turn-over collar buttons close to the throat, and is finished at the front in two deep points a tie of the material adds a finishing touch. The blouse has a fringed shoulder, and clever sleeves, with link fastened cuffs. The skirt is of brown wool tulle, formed of groups of pleats stitched almost knee deep. The trim hat is of brown tulle, trimmed in silken tulle and lined with brown.

THERE is a touch of rose color in the atmosphere of fashion, no matter how the stock market may act. The formerly popular eggshell is being replaced by a hue which is a warm shade. Peach tones are more popular than they have been for some time, both in the daytime and evening mode. Characteristic of the new blouses and light lined bodices to accompany skirts.

ANN ARDEN broadcasts latest style news over WLEX every Tuesday and Thursday at 10:30 a. m.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashion generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or to the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WLEX.

THE LAWYERS WILL DIG IT UP

Teetotaler

Returning His Love Letters Is Hard

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX would gladly answer questions regarding love letters and other problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My engagement was broken about six months ago, because my fiancé fell in love with another girl and left her for me. I used to read the letters he wrote me, and I used to read them over and over, and as I read them I would cry. I would cry because I was so in love with him, and I would cry because I was so alone. I would cry because I was so lonely, and I would cry because I was so sad. I would cry because I was so much in love with him, and I would cry because I was so much alone. I would cry because I was so much in love with him, and I would cry because I was so much alone.

out with him a few times. Then we quarreled and went out with other boys and he went out with another girl. He claims he loves me, but some way or other I seem able to read his mind and am sure he likes this other girl as well. We made up and have been going together again. He gave me a bouquet for my birthday. Now that we have had another quarrel, just because he is in love with me, and I don't care to go with any man who has. I am wondering if it would be right to send him back his compact as I have not used it yet. R. S. Dear E. S. N. I believe I would return the compact, but I would not make a mountain over such a little mole hill as that. You are not engaged to this young man, so why take things so seriously? Almost all young people like this young man better than you think you do, or you wouldn't naturally things to the extent you do. Watch your step, sister, or you will be in love with him.

Should Prosecute Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am legally separated, but not divorced, from my husband. I have two children, whom I am educating and clothing with the assistance of my family, who can ill afford to give me such help. I would have liked to make a small that I couldn't make out at all if it were not for my family and friends. My husband has an excellent government job, but during the past year he has been making a contribution to his family has been $10, a bag of pepperoni, candy and a tin of balloons. If I attempt to collect through the courts, I shall be dismissed and there will be no pay for him but the price of the balloons. I have to see my children's father. What do you advise me of? ANNA B.

Look Out for Love!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I would like to know if you and me in a problem which is confronting me. I met a young man about five months ago, and went

What's in Fashion? Lingerie for Individual Costumes

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—When planning your ensemble costumes during the new year, we recommend you consider your lingerie.

Chemises and Slips

Necklines

Necklines are another part that must be watched when choosing lingerie. If a dress is cut low, then the chemise or slip should also be cut low. If a dress is cut high, then the chemise or slip should also be cut high. If a dress is cut with a wide neckline, then the chemise or slip should also be cut with a wide neckline. If a dress is cut with a narrow neckline, then the chemise or slip should also be cut with a narrow neckline.

Panties and Petticoats

Now costume of slip in blouse and skirt already has a break at the waistline. So the chemise or slip should also have a break at the waistline. If a dress is cut with a wide neckline, then the chemise or slip should also be cut with a wide neckline. If a dress is cut with a narrow neckline, then the chemise or slip should also be cut with a narrow neckline.

Mrs. High Hat and her daughter were talking to a kind of expert in the park. Mrs. High Hat said:

"What is that they are playing?"

"No, I don't think it's a game," answered the expert. "It's a game called 'What's the Matter?'"

"What's the matter?" asked Mrs. High Hat.

"The matter is that you are both of you very much mistaken."

STOCKS ARE ON THE STREET

New York, Dec. 29.—The stock market was unable to find a trend between intermittent waves of short covering, and tax and bar selling in today's session.

The list responded to three separate buying waves, the last coming in the final few minutes, and lifting several points. Industrial shares above last week's final price, but failing to move the heavy rally appreciably. Gains of a point or two were numerous for a time in the morning, and at intervals.

SALES $1,000,000

The close was highly irregular, with gains and losses mostly near even. Transactions aggregated 2,360,000 shares.

A rumorm in call money to 4 per cent, and a touch of the grain market were adverse influences. The loan calling was a normal year-end development, however, and failed to influence rates for time loans.

U. S. Steel, American Can, American Tobacco, B. O. Bond, and Republic Steel and American Express closed about steady. Shares sold about a point, including American Gas and American Water Works. Westinghouse, however, was down.

Asbury was up 1/2 and General Railway Signal. Italic down a point or two included New York Railway, Lackawanna, Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio. Consolidated Gas and Columbia Gas also about a point.

NEWS DISCOUNTED

Important news in the morning included the granting of an injunction to Cyrus Eaton and associates, halting the merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube with Bethlehem Steel. The injunction, drafted by a federal judge, was a blow to the merger.

Both developments appeared to have been largely discounted in the stock market. Republic and American Steel, which are regarded as Eaton Companies, were up for the time, but Bethlehem and Youngstown were little changed.

The Brooklyn Manhattan interest showed strength for a time. In the steel situation, Wall St. is primarily interested in whether the promoter interests will be able to raise the necessary money.

Call money showed the customary year-end firmness, returning 4 1/2 percent, and ending at the highest since May, as loans were called rather heavily. Last year at this time, however, the rate was 6 percent, and in 1929 it was 12 percent.

In the commodity markets, copper was quoted at 15 1/2 cents a pound, up 1/2 for domestic supply, down 1/2 for foreign. It is the latter which is recently recorded low for all time.

The Guaranty Trust Co. in its monthly survey, said that the reduction in the Federal Reserve discount rate will probably have a favorable effect. It stated that the general banking situation is not only strong from the standpoint of deposits, but will be found favorable to business expansion.

Fluctuations in the utilities were light. A few of the oil stocks showed a slight decline, but the market was generally steady. The oil stocks were supported, while Gold and Silver, and the petroleum section, displayed firmness.

Many of the less active industrial and specialties dropped a point or so. Goldman Sachs Trading and Shearson touched new minimums.

Kuppenheimer Cuts Preferred Capital

D. Kuppenheimer & Co., a New York City corporation, has announced that it will reduce its preferred stock from $1,000,000 to $750,000. The reduction is to be made by the company's board of directors, and the new preferred stock will be issued at a 10 percent discount.

The strong financial condition of the company during the past fiscal year has warranted the continuation of the reduction of its preferred stock. A special meeting of the board of directors, held on Dec. 22, 1930, a total of 600,000 shares acquired by purchase, and the redemption were formally cancelled and retired.

These shares, with the amount of preferred stock, were the visually cancelled and retired, reducing the amount of preferred stock now outstanding to 300,000 shares.

Auto Taxation

If Legislatures Shirk Duty, Governors of Massachusetts and New Hampshire Should Be Given Responsibility

Insurance Commissioner John E. Sullivan of New Hampshire, a public official with a fine reputation for independence, indicates he will look with favor upon a fifteen per cent increase of the automobile liability insurance rates. The companies asked for a fifty per cent increase.

This business of boosting insurance rates on motorists has become epidemic, as common as Winter colds or violations of the prohibition law.

And it is about time that the public gave it an antidote, by insisting that this arbitrary right of taxation be wrested away from individual officeholders, no matter how congenial they may be or how bright their reputations may have been polished by favorable publicity.

We see our Legislatures and public officials, in Massachusetts as well as New Hampshire, manifesting little concern in the welfare of the unorganized automobilists, but a mighty high and respectful regard for the well-organized insurance companies.

Why the Legislatures are so anxious to farm out their rights to impose taxes and assess fees to insurance commission-ers and other appointed officials who have no direct responsibility to the public is beyond our comprehension.

The automobile insurance system in both Massachusetts and New Hampshire is a tax, in any way you look at it. In this State it is a tax that amounts to $20,000,000 a year, and is but one of the many loaded upon the automobilists.

And the founders of these State governments, who had had their own experiences with unjustifiable and indirect taxations, desired that the tax-paying system should be maintained by the elected legislators who could be held to account by the people when they offered themselves for re-election, and not delegated to subordinate officeholders secure in long-term appointments.

If the Legislatures have fallen to such a low estate they are anxious to shirk their responsibility and dodge their duties, this responsibility of taxation ought to be lodged in the Governors and Councilors of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, who are elected by the people and are directly accountable to them.

Imagine the disgust of Samuel Adams of Massachusetts and of the elder Wentworth of New Hampshire if they should return and see a tax-paying system which they strove to perpetuate relinquished by Legislatures which helped to create it!

Alien Laws Favoritism

Mr. Chouporian of Armenian Society Right in Protest

Mr. Chouporian of the Armenian Society does well to protest against what he believes to be the discriminations and favoritisms practiced under the immigration laws. If it is not true that the United States is a land of equal opportunity to all, certainly it is a land of favoritism for the super-Americans to denounce all aliens as lacking in fidelity to the United States when they permit conditions to be established and perpetuated which induce lack of confidence in our government among these aliens.

From the moment they begin their immigration to the United States, the aliens are beset by temptations, petty grafts and corruptions calculated to drive out of their brains the thought that the United States is the land of the free and the asylum of justice.

Immigration rings, conspiring with some of our embassies and corruptible legations abroad, begin by sulcating the aliens of secret fees and graft payments in order to secure their visas or their rightful place in the quotas.

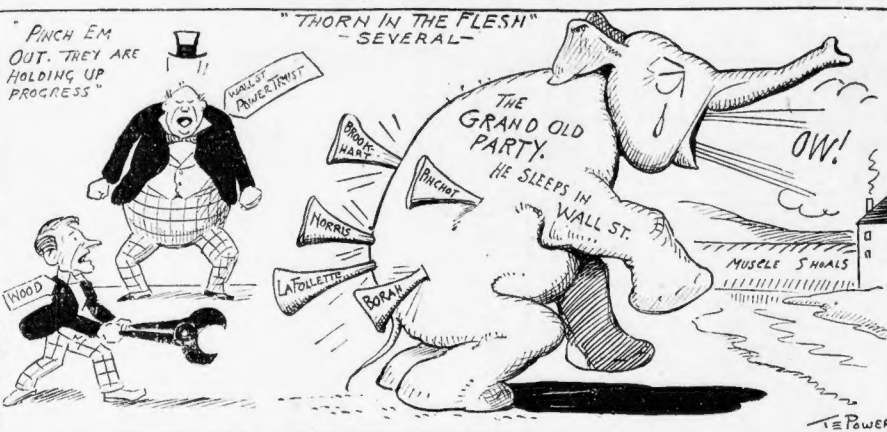

Once they land, they are too often ribbed or robbed by the harpies on the shores who operate crooked aid and welfare societies with the knowledge if not with the collusion of some of our government officials.

And when they seek citizenship, in order to assume the solemn obligations of their new country, they are too often obliged to fight their way through naturalization thieves and fixers who either have or pretend to have secret influence with government officials and the courts.

The immigration laws of our country are operated by a bureaucracy. And, as everybody who has had any experience knows, these bureaucracies are pretty free for their favors to politicians of affluence who can in any way perpetrate their jobs for them. And they are prone to be pretty indifferent or contemptuous toward men and women of humble circumstances who are powerless to return favors for favors.

Most laws are intended to be just. Law depends for justice very largely upon honest and impartial enforcement of it. Mr. Chouporian asks for that and nothing more, and his protest should be accepted in that spirit by the immigration authorities.

"OUCH," IS THE WORD

A thankless child is sharper than a serpent's tooth, of course. But look at this elephant and learn of things worse, and sharper, than a whole set of serpent's teeth. The large tacks, thorns, or what do you call them, jabbed into the Grand Old Elephant, were put there by his own children. Every name, on every thorn, is that of a fighting Republican. And there will probably be more to follow.

What did the old elephant do to deserve this? Nothing much, he only used party funds to finance a Ku Klux Klan attack on Norris, a Republican Senator in Nebraska, but then think what a good excuse he had. Norris does not want private power companies to own Muscle Shoals, built with public money. If that is not Bolshevism, what is it?

Listen, World! - Grab Hold

By ELSIE ROBINSON
Blame It on the Tin Can

IF THIS article seems to hunch, you can blame it on that tin can. I'm doing it with half a thumb and a section of my little finger. . . . the rest of my digits being parked under bandages. My own fault, of course. I've transplanted hundreds of plants before this. I know you have to jump right on the job and make it snappy when you're opening them. Yet, there I stood, fiddling and fussing and day-dreaming with that cuss of a dress of mine—rusty ones in particular. I know you have to jump right on the job and make it snappy when you're opening them. Yet, there I stood, fiddling and fussing and day-dreaming with that cuss of a dress of mine—rusty ones in particular. I know you have to jump right on the job and make it snappy when you're opening them. Yet, there I stood, fiddling and fussing and day-dreaming with that cuss of a dress of mine—rusty ones in particular.

one way to open a can. Grab hold! Grab hold tight! Don't shilly-shally! Don't try to handle it with your finger tips. Wrap your fist around that problem—go to it with all you have! If it's a rusty, mean actin' tin can—and it usually is—don't turn your head away—don't try to see the danger and nastiness of it. Keep your eye on it! Work quick! If it's a poisonous, mean actin' problem—and it usually is—don't try to kid yourself with a lot of sentimental blab. Don't hope that "something will turn up" to settle it. Don't postpone it, or try to think up some excuse for ducking it! For as sure as you do, it will get you! Face that problem! Look at it squarely. Get a good grip on it—then don't let go until you've settled it. Why does life turn on us and rend us? We didn't take hold of life when we should have taken hold of it. We fussed and fiddled and hesitated and evaded and "hoped something would turn up." We didn't think we were being cowardly. We never dreamed we were wrecking our careers. Yet, as certainly as though we had planned every move, we prepared ourselves for disaster. Life lies in your hand—today. It has rusty edges. It has tricky seams. It can inflict terrible wounds upon you if it gets out of control. Keep your grip on life! (Copyright, 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.)

SOVIET RUSSIA reports that Christmas was a tremendous success—Santa Claus was shot by firing squad and not a soul got anything.

THIS THING of exchanging Christmas presents that you don't want in somebody's brilliant idea and is ought to be adopted by Wall Street—wouldn't it be grand to be able to swap your Seaboard Air-line bonds?

Wonderful

And Most Skillful.

DIVING THROUGH A TIRE, TO TACKLE

The young man jumping through the automobile tire is practicing for the West Point football team. Running at high speed, he jumps, head first, through the tire, held a few feet above the ground, and tackles the dummy with energy enough to bring down his man and, perhaps, break a few of his bones. This most ingenious practice teaches the tackler to make his way through a narrow opening, and dive head first at his opponent with deadly accuracy.

Any one of a hundred thousand young Americans would gladly practice this and other devices of football coaches, day in and day out, obeying rules, abstaining from late hours, and everything else apt to diminish energy.

Football is interesting, because it shows what young Americans will do when their interest is aroused.

The question is, how can the great universities interest boys in other, more important things, as much as they are interested in football and the glory of football victory?

The chances are, ten to one, that in all of his future career, the young man in the picture will not work as hard at anything as he works at this football practice.

He will, probably, go through life as others do, his really violent effort stopping when he steps football.

If, in real life, in work that is to decide his success or failure, he were asked, figuratively, to jump through an automobile tire and throw himself, head first, at a dummy, he would say: "Don't be unreasonable."

In his youth, a boy will work from sun up to sun down, exhausting himself, undergoing any privation, risking broken bones, and life itself, for the sake of his school or college. He works not for himself, but for the OTHER boys, for the school and its reputation.

What a pity this unselfish work could not be extended all through life! What a wonderful thing it would be for the United States if the ablest men in it were working for their country and all of its people, as college boys work for the college and all of its boys.

But our ablest men are working only for themselves. Such is the difference between boyhood and manhood, between ambition and selfishness.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Diary of a modern Peepsy. Easy to my watch repairer who invariably charges $2.50 and met up with Brock Pemberton, an erstwhile co-clave on the old Evening Mail and now a rabid of the theater. So back home to twitter this dailyness.

In the afternoon fell to reading letters of James and is created especially in the case of the dith Nicholson. And a beautiful thing was the William Lyon Phelps inquired if I liked the death. He replied: "Why, yes, and I will go right on living."

To dinner with Henry and Anne Sell and a fright when a shot from a cooked pheasant rolled under my tongue, mistaking it for a tooth filling. Then with my wife to see "Grand Hotel," the $12.50 drama but not worth the $12.50 paid for two tickets. Late to bed.

Many innocent side street hotels in New York are havens of organized vice. They make attractive rates to elderly and respectable couples, for they give an aura of benign and valetudinary dignity they could not otherwise obtain. Most of them are the proverbial stonks from Broadway.

Here gather the stool pigeon, and underworld fixers. The drug and liquor caches are often there, which runners are sent forth. Vice barons buy a majority interest in such inns and control them in the same manner in which they control the night clubs.

Gang murders, robberies and shake-downs are hatched in this atmosphere of pseudo-respectability. Unhappily, many visitors to the city go innocently to this type of hotel. In two instances recently utter strangers have been held as material witnesses.

A gigantic hotel north of Times Square is the reputed keystone of the alleged liquor ring in the world. Every cellar and hallway is said to be an illicit salarman. For two years it has been the topic of vaudeville and musical revue jokes, but continues wide open.

Two of New York's most sensational and recent crimes have taken place in hotel rooms—the pistolings of the notorious Arnold Rothstein and the equally notorious, Lepi. In each instance, however, the police arrived, trails grew immediately cold. And, here, Mr. Commissioner, what's being done about the Rothstein and Diamond mysteries?

In such hotels one hears the jargon of the underworld—such words as "grand," "cutting," "the deck," and "the bust in the arm." Here are the benned and peroxidized ladies who lurk in the nocturnal hinter of the night clubs—the glorified molls of the gunmen.

Jack Lait, greatest exponent of modern thieves' slang, has broadcast the new name for a red-headed dame in the world of racketeers. She is a Kewie. It comes oddly enough, from respectable Kew Gardens, where all roof tops are red.

Lait is also authority for the origin of that Broadway slang: "It's the real McCoy." A token of respect to Kid McCoy was once standing in front of his cafe on Broadway and 29th Street. A drunk hurled a bottle of beer at him.

"You ain't the real McCoy, you hunched up blubberhead!" A real McCoy let one go flush to the jaw. Coming to 10 minutes later, the drunk murmured: "It's the real McCoy!"

The most dramatic, yet most inelegant, simile I ever heard of was "It was being quick like a shadow." It was the lobby of a shady Brooklyn hotel. A rufaced type in answer to some question, just as I passed, said:

"I asked a kid? Why, he's as crooked as a shadow." A rufaced type in answer to some question, just as I passed, said:
